

I am sending my opinion on the NAB's attempt to limit satellite radio from providing my local traffic information. I have been a subscriber to XM satellite radio service for over 6 months now, and I thoroughly enjoy the freedom of choice in programming that I am willing to pay for. Maybe local radio stations should improve their service, or as a better service to it's customers, have their broadcasts on satellite services. I feel that the healthy competition offered by XM and other services will only better serve the consuming public. Satellite services should be allowed to effectively compete in a free marketplace.
